Embodied Carbon Leadership Award Application

The purpose of this Award is to recognise individuals, public entities or private organizations who have made significant contributions to the reducing embodied carbon, beyond achievements associated with any individual project.

Applications for the this category could look like outstanding individual professional accomplishments, verified portfolio commitments to embodied carbon reduction, strategic plans for material purchasing, advancements in environmental product declarations, strategic plans, or public policies and programs targeting embodied carbon reductions.

Applicants are asked to answer questions outlining their contribution and describing how their work has advanced knowledge, or contributed to wholesale reductions in embodied carbon. Judges will be assessing applicants on a variety of criteria including:

- breadth of work;
- size of audience;
- scale of impact; and
- how their work has advanced general knowledge and awareness of embodied carbon.

Judges will prioritize contributions made within the last two years (from 2023 onward). While earlier work may be acknowledged for context, the evaluation will focus on recent impact, innovation, and relevance to current practice.

Please outline your contribution to reducing embodied carbon in the built environment. Quantify impact where possible. *

Innovation in Industry Category Application

This award celebrates innovations that advance the reduction of embodied carbon in the built environment. Eligible submissions may include technologies (such as materials, software, or tools), processes, or case studies that demonstrate meaningful progress. The emphasis is on contributions that have impact beyond a single project or organization, with the potential to influence industry practices at scale.

Applicants are asked to answer questions outlining their contribution and describing how their work has advanced knowledge, or contributed to wholesale reductions in embodied carbon. Judges will be assessing applicants on a variety of criteria including:

- novelty/uniqueness
- real-world application;
- scale of impact; and
- how their work has advanced general knowledge and awareness of embodied carbon.
